

Epilogue

As the party approached Sylas' Mountain Crypt, they realized that they needed something else beyond the elemental Guardian magics to overcome Sylas' powers. The answer lay in the journey that they have made along this quest. Transforming the encounter memories with the help of the magics from the Guardians, revealed there is yet one more element they had obtained during their journey. Because when Sylas projected his form to attack the party along their journey, he had expected the party to be defeated and no longer venturing to his mountain crypt. As a result, the heroes were able to take advantage of their unexpected arrival to catch Sylas off guard, and use the Guardian magics to defeat him while he is vulnerable at his mountain crypt.

With Sylas defeated, the party has succeeded in their quest to stop this latest Awakening. Some of the old memories that had been lost by everyone during the Awakening may not be regained, but new memories had been formed as well, and will continue to be made. Just like the heroes' memories of friendship during this quest and their shared puzzle solving journey.

As the party stand triumphant at Sylas' mountain crypt wondering about their next step, news of their victory has already spread across Square Grid. Before long, a large airship slowly flew over the mountains and approached the crypt from a distance. As the airship eventually arrived and hovered overhead, the familiar face of Cid appeared, beckoning the party onboard to give them a faster ride back to town. It would be a well-earned rest for the party, but after this journey, would they be going back to their same lives before the Awakening? Only time will tell...

* * * * *

